An exceptionally busy year for major exhibitions – 2011 has seen Techtextil (pictured), Index, JEC and ITMA all take place in Europe – has helped to boost an industry being buffeted once more by the prevailing weakness in the world's economy. Can growth in India and China provide a way out? pages 11–20, 76

Luxury hotels in India source their textiles locally, creating great potential for the domestic industry. However, a notable exception is awnings, where hoteliers have to rely in imported brands. Reena Mital examines this market pages 11–15

The quality of air outdoors has been a concern for some time, but now legislators are turning their attention to indoors and nonwoven manufacturers stand to gain, according to Adrian Wilson pages 2–9

Demand for hotel rooms in India is booming creating great opportunities for suppliers of technical textiles, says Reena Mital pages 11–15

A seminar held in India explored the potential to the country's technical textiles industry of thriving local markets for clothing technology and transportation. Samuel Joseph reports pages 17–20
